

Healthcare worker receives top NHS award

Berkshire Healthcare NHS Foundation Trust are proud to announce that Healthcare Worker Jordan Herrington has been awarded the prestigious NHS England Chief Nursing Officer Healthcare Support Worker Award.

An extension to the Chief Nursing Officer (CNO) and Chief Midwifery Officer (CMidO) Awards, the award aims to recognise and celebrate the vital contribution made by Healthcare Support Workers who consistently demonstrate NHS values and behaviours when fulfilling their everyday roles to provide excellent patient care.

Jordan was nominated by a fellow colleague and was commended for continuously going above and beyond in his role to support patients, carers, and other members of staff. His team remarked on how he was positive, enthusiastic, and committed to achieving quality care and quality improvement on the ward, as well as holding an excellent work ethic.

Debbie Fulton, Director of Nursing and Therapies at Berkshire Healthcare NHS Foundation Trust, said:

“Healthcare support workers play a really important role in caring for our patients and supporting our clinical teams. Jordan’s team loves working with him, and his care for all is evident in every action he takes. It’s brilliant to see a member of our Trust recognised and celebrated for the vital work they do – well done Jordan!”

On receiving the award, Jordan Herrington said:

“It is an absolute honour to receive this award and I am so thankful to the fantastic nursing team on Bluebell Ward at Prospect Park Hospital for being true inspirations and mentors. It fills me with a great sense of wellbeing to look back on the work I have done and the people I have helped, knowing I have made a difference to the lives of those in our care. I am lucky to work with a team that promotes personal and professional development and encourages me to be the best that I can. This award will be a reminder to myself that our dedication and resilience does amazing things for people, and I will wear it with pride.”
