Holly's Story

Hello, my name is Holly, and I am a Lead Lived Experience Practitioner within Berkshire Healthcare. Once, I was sat where you are now; about to transition from CAMHS to adult mental health services, simply because I was getting older. The transition from one service to another can be a daunting one; especially if you have felt safe or comfortable where you are.

There might also be other big changes going on in your life right now, and that can make this transition even more challenging. However, we want you know that we are here to support you during this time and have created this information booklet to help you understand what will happen next.

One of the biggest differences between CAMHS and adult services is that you will now get more choice; that is, you will make decisions about your own care (where you are able to) rather than your parents or guardians making these decisions on your behalf. Another change from CAMHS to adult services is the type of environments you might find yourself in, especially if you need to spend some time in hospital. You might also find the staff treat you differently, as the rules around consent for children and adults differ.

What does not change from CAMHS to adult services, however, is our care for you and your wellbeing. What drives us all is a desire to help those who need us, and to help everyone achieve Recovery – whatever that looks like for them. We hope you find the information in this pack useful and, if you still have any questions, we welcome you to reach out via CMHLivedExperience@berkshire.nhs.uk.

The journey into adulthood can be a challenging time but it can also open up new opportunities; we hope to support you on this journey as best we can.

What is transition?

You may have heard people starting to use the word transition and wonder what they mean.

A transition is the process of preparing, planning, and moving. In this case – from children’s to adult’s mental health services as you turn 18.

Depending on your needs you might transition from CAMHS into Secondary care. These are adult mental health services such as a Community Mental Health Team (CMHT).

Or you may be transitioning from CAMHS into Primary care. These are community-based services like your GP.

Thoughts from young adults who have recently transitioned

“Transitioning from children to adult services is a chance to positively use the extra responsibility and have more control in your recovery” (ED, aged 23, transitioned in 2017)

“It feels absolutely terrifying, but there are still some amazing people in adult services” (EC, aged 20, transitioned in 2020)

“Even though it may feel like the support levels have dropped, there are still so many ways to access support, for example: utilising crisis lines, your GP, and mental health charities” (LO, aged 19, transitioned in 2022)

“Transition is a lot less scary than expected, the adult mental health workers are generally understanding of the fact that you are 17 or 18” (ZI, aged 17, transitioned in 2022)

My thoughts on transition

Use this page to write down anything about transition that worries you and any questions you want to ask.

- I understand why I am transitioning to adult mental health services
- I understand my information from CAMHS will be transferred to adult services

What could be different in adult services?

Differences

Making decisions about your own care that will contribute to your recovery journey

How to prepare

Know what works well for you whilst staying open minded and willing to explore different treatment options and techniques

More responsibility regarding managing appointments

Ensure you have all the right contact details, and know how to make the appointment and maintain communication with the healthcare team if you cannot attend

Less time with clinicians

Come with an idea of what you would like to talk about to ensure you get the most out of your appointment

More structured approach. Appointments may seem less flexible

Ask questions. Understand the plan from your healthcare professionals' point of view to help manage your expectations of them and your care

Unfamiliar clinical environments

It's important that you feel comfortable in your surroundings. Ask to look around pre/post appointment if required. Take a soothing item along with you to help comfort/distract you e.g. a book or some music

Less involvement from your Parent or Carer

Ensure your care worker is aware of your needs and level of involvement you want from your parent/carer

Uncertainty regarding wait list time-scale

Don't be afraid to keep chasing your appointment with the service, but also utilise other local support services available to you whilst you wait (see pages 21-31)

You might find yourself surrounded by service users who are a lot older than you

Remember that people of all ages will be accessing the adult mental health services. This will seem unfamiliar at first, but they are there for the same reason as you – to get support. As always, treat the people around you with respect, and talk to your key worker with any concerns.

Who's in the team?

Named Workers

My job is to communicate with you, your referrers, relatives, carers, and other health and social care professionals to coordinate your care.

Lived Experience Practitioners (LExPs)

My job is to draw upon my own lived experience and recovery journey to support your recovery. I have personal experience of mental health challenges, either through my own direct experience of mental distress or through caring for someone else. I will listen compassionately, understand you and inspire hope, demonstrating that recovery is possible.

Community Connectors

My job is to work with you to set wellbeing goals and put the steps in place for you to achieve them. I will help you find and access local community groups, charities, and services. If you need my support, I can come with you while you settle in. My encouragement and support will empower you to achieve the goals you set for yourself.

Community Mental Health Teams (CMHTs)

Our job is to work with you to review your safety plan as part of your treatment, and make sure you know how to access urgent mental health support in your community.

Psychological Therapists

My job is to determine which psychological therapies will help you feel less distressed and promote long term wellbeing. I work with people with a wide range of mental health issues such as anxiety, depression, addiction, psychosis and more.

General Practitioners (GPs)

My job is to treat all common medical conditions and if needed, refer you to hospital or other medical services for specialist or urgent treatment. I'm the first point of contact if you need any help, if you've been discharged from services but you're starting to feel worse, get in touch.

Mental Health Practitioners

My job is to support you in your recovery by providing brief psychological interventions. I can help you learn skills to manage overwhelming emotions, address issues with sleep, build your confidence and problem-solving skills. I can also help coordinate any medicines you may require working alongside the mental health pharmacists.

Social Prescribers/Wellbeing Advisors

Our job is to link you to sources of appropriate, non-clinical support in the community. We support people with loneliness, social isolation, housing, drug and alcohol (advocacy), peer support and finance issues. We are part of a wider multidisciplinary team of people from physical health, mental health, primary care and social care.

Top Tips for your transition

We've collected some helpful tips from young adults who have been through exactly what you're going through.

- ✓ Stick with it! Engage as much as you can, you'll get out what you put in
 - ✓ Own your journey! Set your own goals and work towards them
 - ✓ Ask questions! Don't be afraid to ask if you don't understand something
 - ✓ Be honest! Communicate your feelings – no matter what they are

Feeling anxious, try the TIPP technique.

T is for Temperature – lower your temperature to lower your heart rate

I is for Intense exercise – release anxious energy in a healthy way

P is for Paced breathing – a few minutes of focused breathing can help you feel calmer

P is for Paired muscle relaxation – tensing and releasing muscles in the body helps you feel more grounded

Note: The TIPP technique is not advisable for people with a heart condition. If you have a physical condition or an eating disorder, please talk to your GP before trying this technique.

A message from a mental health service user

“Hi, I’m Jess and not so long ago, I was in the exact same position as you. So, I know how daunting it can be moving from one service to the next. The adult mental health services do work differently, but just like CAMHS, there is still a system in place to support you. You are not alone, and you are still cared for.

At the moment, you might be feeling overwhelmed or anxious about your transition, and this is completely understandable. My advice would be to remember the actions PAT.

P is for process. Take time to process the information in this pack, knowledge is power.

A is for ask. If there’s anything you aren’t sure about, ask the people around you, they are there to help.

T is for talk. Talk to your friends, family or carers about how you’re feeling so they can support you.

Good luck with your transition, keep moving forward. You can do this!”

Jess, Mental health service user.

My Workbook Pages

Take this space to list any concerns you may have around the transition from Children's services.

This is an opportunity for you to be honest about how you are feeling and write down anything that is worrying you. This will also provide you with some short-term goals that we can support you with before you move on.

My checklist

Here are a list of goals to work towards during your transition to set you up for success once you move on. Tick them off as and when you feel confident with them. You can also use these as talking points with your healthcare professionals to get the information you will need.

- I know which service (if any) I will transition to
- I know the name of my new worker is:.....
- I've had a meeting with my current worker and new service
- I'm confident I know what support is available to me while I am transitioning between services
- The people I would like involved in my transition are:.....
- I have been given information about, and understand how, adult mental health services work and how they differ from young people's mental health services
- I know someone I can talk to when I am struggling:.....
- I understand my right to confidentiality
- I am ready to attend appointments by myself
- If I don't feel comfortable attending appointments by myself, I'd liketo come with me
- I can book my own appointments
- I can order and collect my own prescriptions
- I am independent at home. For example, I can prepare a meal for myself
- I can call/contact GP/hospitals/clinic myself if there is a query about my condition and/or therapy
- I can/am learning to drive or I can use public transport to access services/my community
- I know how to access services for advice e.g., on relationships, physical and sexual health, or parenting
- I understand that I will make decisions about my mental health treatment alongside the healthcare team
- I have thought about my next steps regarding education or employment
- I can tell education staff/employer about my condition and ask them for support

What support do I need?

There may be things on the checklist that you are unable to tick off and that's ok. Use this space to make a note of any support we can offer to help you feel comfortable and confident with this change.
